No Single, Simple Act of Trust'

LONDON (Reuters) - One gesture by North Vietnam during the Lunar New Year truce in Vietnem could have led to peace talks but lack of trust wrecked the chance, Prime Minister Wilson said Tuesday night. (See also Page

Commenting in a nationally-televised report on his talks with Soviet Prime Minister

Alexei Kosygin, Wilson said: "Disappointment and deep mutual distrust, above all the resumption, perhaps the in-tensification, of this murderous war will make far more difficult the task we have of nurturing a new spirit of our grasp. One single, simple trust could have achieved it. "It is true that one gesture would have cost them nothing in terms of security or even face — could have set in motion events which could

Wilson also repeated that "the intricate mechanism leading to peace which we created is not destroyed by the bombing in the north or the murder in the south." "We shall nother be de-terred by failure nor driven into irrelevant postures," he added in a reference to

Brock Fired as 'Example'

OTTAWA (CP) - Rear-Admiral Jeffry Brock suggested Tuesday he was fired by Defence Minister Hellver in August, 1964, as an example to other officers who might question the minister's policy.

He told the Commons defence committee during a five-hour grilling that "beyond a shadow of a doubt" his firing inhibited other officers from giving Mr. Hellyer frank advice.

Admiral Brock was flag officer Atlantic Coast when he was sacked four years before his normal retirement age of 55. ONLY REASON

The only reason given him by Mr. Hellyer was that armed forces personnel were going to be cut from top to bottom and "you are at the top."

He said he was astounded at his firing because only a few days earlier then associate defence minister Cardin, now justice minister, had applauded his plans to advance integration in Maritime Command

Crucial Test

So THE FEDERAL Conservative leadership convention will be held September 6-9. This is later than desired by Mr. Diefenbaker who wanted an early confrontation with his party rivals, although the dif-ficulty of finding sufficient hotel facilities for the large expected attendance apparently had bearing on the choice of date. It cannot thus be regarded as a setback to the Conservative leader by the Camp coterie that leads the movement to have him displaced.

It will be open season now for ambitious hats to be thrown into the ring. Some have already been thrown or held ready to be tossed pending reaction to verbal trial balloons sent aloft to test the political atmosphere. There will be no dearth of aspirants for the post, however; that much already seems certain.

The big question still remaining of course is whether Mr. Diesenbaker will let his name stand, fighting in characteristic vein the attempts to replace him, or decide that a graceful voluntary exit is the wisest course. This is something his would-be successors doubtless await with a degree of apprehension, for even if he stands and is defeated the reigning Conservative chieftain is still individually the most powerful personality in his party and could be a factor affecting the prospects of his rivals.

That several opponents are ready to contest his role, however, including former members of his cabinet when in office, is bound to carry weight with Mr. Diefenbaker as he ponders the course to choose. It will not escape him that even re-election, and the odds against this seem to be mounting, would not offset the fact that he was strongly opposed while holding the leadership of his party. Keen competition for the post is much different when a leader nas given up the reins and the field is freshly open for all comers.

It is this that must intrude largely on John Diefenbaker as he weighs the pros and cons of the situa-tion to be faced in September. The disclosure of all the contenders for the Conservative leadership may well be a determining factor in his decision, but it well be a determining factor in his decision, but it would not be surprising if he attends the convention prepared to retire in favor of someone else. He could afford to do so with no small measure of personal satisfaction, for he has given his party great service and been its biggest vote-getter by far. Nor will he be easily replaced in the context of personal visor and personal visor v vigor and persuasive talent. Moreover, by his example the leaning of his own preference would be a strong factor in the selection of a successor.

Apart from these considerations, also, the Sepember convention of the Conservative Party is for it an historic test. It could be a watershed as to its future; whether it is to continue to carry on under competent and well supported leadership and in this guise be the alternative to the Liberal Party as the government of Canada, as has hitherto been the case, or whether its image is on the wane as the NDP makes sufficient inroads on public favor as to challenge its

Strength Dwindles

TT IS BECOMING increasingly difficult to make a competent appraisal of the effects of the national defence department's headlong rush towards unification of the armed forces when so many of the figures presented by the defence minister's spokesmen to the Commons committee studying the question are shown to be misleading if not actually false.

Last Thursday, figures were introduced to the defence committee indicating that through economies effected by integration it had been possible to allocate a greater proportion of the defence budget to new arms and equipment.

Col. Douglas Harkness, former Conservative defence minister, challenged them. Instead of the claimed 17 per cent of defence appropriation available for "capital expenditures," he pointed out, the department was actually able to spend only 12 per cent, or substantially less than the previous year's

His challenge was substantiated by figures from the auditor-general's department, and in the resulting confusion Defence Minister Paul Hellyer admitted a mistake and apologized to the committee.

On Monday came another charge of "slanted figures" being given the committee, in the process of studying the unification bill prior to its return to the Commons for third reading.

This time it was Air Marshal E. M. Reyno, chief of personnel of the armed forces, who reported that recruiting in 1966 totalled 10,822, an increase of 939 over the total of new enlistments for the previous

He said the record was encouraging. But Mr. Michael Forrestal, a Conservative from Halifax, would not allow the department's witness to claim any cause for congratulation because at the same time they were recruiting the 10,822 young men no fewer than 14,792, many of them skilled and trained at great expense, had left the armed services.

Members, at the same time, could recall that Victoria Liberal Capt. David Groos, chairman of the committee; only last Thursday had provided defence department of the symmetry of the symmetry of the symmetry.

department figures to show the strength of the armed forces at Dec. 31, 1966, was 104,957—a drop of 409 in a single month.

It is true that Air Marshal Reyno's enlistment figure was perfectly correct. But the point is that it does not show, by itself, the true relationship between enlistment and re-enlistment on the one hand and retirements on the other.

The truth would appear to be that the Canadian armed forces are suffering a significant decline and that, more important, the new enlistments cannot begin to compensate for the loss of experience rep-

The contention of the opponents of unification. all along has been that morale would decline as a result of it, and that men loyal to the service of their choice would refuse to serve because of their loss of Evidence in support of the critics continues to mount in spite of misleading figures—and oppositionto-harden because of them.

U.S. Bombs, Peace Hopes Fade Away

By KEN PRITCHARD From Ottawa

Deep, disappointment was expressed in many areas when the United States resumed the hombing of North Vietnam this week after a brief pause. The strikes dashed hopes that were mounting because of peate signals from Moscow, London, Paris, Hanoi and elsewhere.

The official U.S. position on the suspension of bombing was reiterated last week by State Secretary Dean Rusk. He said its continuance would depend on some reciprocal move by the Communists towards military de-escalation.

A few hours after the bombing pause was terminated Tuesday, President Johnson said in Washington that the U.S. had had "no alternative."

"Unfortunately, the only response we have had from the Hanoi government was to use the (truce) periods for major in South Vietnam. Despite our efforts, and those of third parties, no other response has yet come from Hanoi."

Johnson added that "the door to peace is and will remain One year ago, the U.S. held open the same door by suspend-ing the bombing of the North for 37 days after receiving in-dications from third parties, including Russia, that this could lead to negotiations. Peace talks did not develop and the bombing was resumed.

Red China Army Cool to Maoists

From Hong Kong

"Power grows out of the barrel of the gun!" China's embattled Manist faction constantly reiterates that slogan, appealing to the People's Liberation Army to its guns against the powerful anti-Maoist forces. That appeal is meeting with less than enthusiastic response. The Maoists' decision to bring the armed forces into the power struggle is proving less than a brilliant stroke of strategy.

Major Role

It is now clear that the army, ized power structure remaining amid the chaos of Communist China, will play a significant role in the resolution of the present power struggle. It is also clear that the army is reluctant to fighting. There are, moreover, major differences among both the army's high command and its entrenched provincial

The army's limited role at the present moment dramatically illuminated the almost untenable position the Maoist clique now occupies.

Perfect Model

Ever since the middle of 1959, former field marshal Lin Piao, the heir presumptive of Communist Party Chairman Mao Tse-tung, has been enpaign to "purity and heighten the ideological standard" of the armed forces. The military were for years held up to civilians as the perfect model of men inspired by the canonical thought of Mao.

The failure of indoc among the minutely organized and officiously disciplined soldiers explains in part, why indoctrination could not suc ceed among the dispersed and disparate civilian population.

Vulnerable

A number of reasons lie behind the struggle. Relatively hardheaded, the military recognize that preservation of their forces intact is the best hope for the maintenance of Communist rule in China. If they should become deeply involved in the present power struggle, the civil wa that would almost certainly follow could rip the country epart. It would also make China vulnerable to its external enemies.

Three Mutinies

The conflict between profesgenerals is a fundamental cause of present schism within the military establishment. The professionals, who have staged three major mutinies in the past 17 years, according to the Maoists, have nothing but contempt for the political generals, who by loud professions of loyalty Mao and by toadying to the Maoists' caprices.

General Bias

Considering the schism, it is not remarkable that the army has restricted itseld to supporting the Maoist status quo in the cities but has hardly moved in the countryside. Nor is it remarkable that the small units and have employed a minimum of force to suppress minor disturbances. The general bias of the armed forces is mildly anti-Maoist - although their actions in support of the status quo have been mildly pro-

As of this moment, the army is not willing to go to war with the Chinese people. It knows from the experience of both the Japanese invaders and the Chinese Nationalists how nearly impossible it is for a relatively small armed landforce to control an enormous and hostile populace spread over a vast land area. Canny generals are, moreover, aware that the anti-Maoist populace is directed by its natural leader-the communist cadres who have been consolidating their positions

Pill Combinations Lethal Especially with Liquor

By GEORGE GETZE

Some of the most common and most beneficial medicines can become dangerous when unwittingly used in combination with other drugs, U.S. Food and Drug Administration officials warn.

Pharmacists have a word for this hazard. They call it "potentiation"—the stepping up and exaggeration of the effects of one drug on another, so that instead of benefitting they can kill.

The people who are most liable to the danger of potentiation are those who doctor themselves, those who often get prescriptions from more than one doctor without crosschecking, and those who take tranquilizers and sedatives-and drink alcoholic drinks,

According to Frederick M. Garfield, deputy director of the bureau of drug abuse control, alcohol's effect on those who have taken barbiturates is the best known of potentiation dangers, but all kinds of combinations of drugs and medicines can be

"For example, a patient can be taking tranquilizers for nerves and take a sleeping pill at night. He might never wake up, Garfield said.

"Or a person can be taking tranquilizers, catch a cold and dose himself with over-the-counter antihistamines he sees advertised," 'That can be very dangerous, too."

"Many deaths classified as barbiturate suicides are probably not suicides at all," Paul A. Pumpiam of the bureau said. "They probably are not even accidents of the kind in which drowsy people take more capsules

From the Oyster

with Alec Merriman

We blooded our new travel wagon on the shakedown trip to Campbell River over the weekend. Fishing with Campbell River cuide John Ebert and Finlayson Arm salmon guide Gordy Lamont we brought home six steelhead from the Oyster, Quinsam and Campbell Rivers.

Right smart we discovered we hadn't brought along anything in which to place the fish and we now have steelhead scales and roe smattered about the wagon. Big plastic bags will be standard equipment from now on.

We took the travel wagon over some pretty rough logging roads and trails and found the limited slip axle (positraction) was a definite asset. The big protruding west coast mirrors appeared to be for the birds in bush travel, but they were pretty nice to see through when we came to a dead-end road at broken bridge and had to back up on the narrow trail for a

Lamont, Annahelle Grice and wife Taffy were along for the first trip'and we returned to Cedar Lake, midway between Campbell River and Kelsey Bay. There we tried out the LP stove and dinette with a ham steak, deer-sausage and bean

In all, except for cracking one of the big mirrors and finding out the factory supplied us with nearly empty LP gas bombs for cooking, it was an exceptionally satisfying shakedown trip. The heavy duty springs and big-six engine set us well on the pot-holed, muddy-overgrown logging trails.

It was quite an event to see Lamont get his first steelhead

Gordy, who is an expert freshwater fisherman and hunter as well as a salmon guide, taught Ebert how to fish properly about 10 or 12 years ago. They fished the Cowichan River from top to bottom and today they talk about some execptionally successful trips in those days.

On the Oyster that evening it was Ebert showing the old master how to fish his river. We caught all the steelhead within half a mile of the mouth, just above the new bridge. Ehert made a cast and drifted his bait through the run. He apparently had a touch, but didn't sink the book.

There's one in there, Gordy," he said. "Come and get it." Gordy waded out to Ebert and placed his lure just where Ebert said. On the second drift he hooked, and later beached

Ebert was tickled, especially as he had been able to call the shot and lead his pal to a fish. Lamont showed a wide alow grin. He was obviously pleased that his protege had learned his lessons so well.

But he wasn't going to let Ehert think he had to be guided Next morning he found his own 14-pounder on the Oyster and another in the Campbell in the evening That first night Ebert hooked a steelhead in a pocket just above where Lamont got his, and so did we.

"She's a fresh hot run in the Oyster tonight," Ebert said. Incidentally, Lamont lost his canvas game carry-all con-taining his plastic tackle holder with all his steelhead rigging, and he thinks he left it on the banks of the Campbell below the Comox Logging bridge. If anyone found it, there is a reward for turning it over to Ebert at the Rustic Motel or the Sportsman Centre.

Oldtime Campbell River fisherman Frank Dingwall is proclaiming that this will be known as the Year of the Big Fish and he predicts the Salmon River will give up a 27-pound

Henry Oilson leads the Campbell River Sportsman Centre steelhead contest with a 24.8-pounder from the Salmon. The contest takes in everything north of and including the Oyster River, and so far five fish weighed in have been heavier than

An interesting sidelight of the contest is that the big trophy will be for the aggregate weight of an angler's three heaviest fish. It won't be a fluke catch that wins that contest.

Again in 1966, Sun Life's Annual Report reflects continuing growth, progress and financial strength.

People who buy insurance from Sun Life expect and get value for their money. The premium you pay for a participating life insurance policy is not your actual costdividends reduce your outlay or increase your savings and protection. In 1967 new dividend scales will result in an increase in dividends to individual participating policyders and the total to be paid in 1967 is estimated at $67,279,000. This was made possible because of excellent favorable mortality, and general operating efficiency. In 1966 a new Company record was set with sales of more than $1,000,000,000 in ordinary life insurance while in sales of group life insurance the Company maintained a leading place in the industry. Today more than three million men, women and children are enjoying Sun Life protection.

Meeting growing, changing needs keeps Sun Life growing and changing, too. Research and development bring forth new and better ways to give policyholders more value for their life and health insurance premium dollars. Outstanding value in Sun Life policies and outstanding service by trained Sun Life representatives have built the confidence and response that has made Sun Life grow since 1871 into the largest Canadian life insurance company. Garden Notes

Greenhouse Blues

By M. V. CHESNUT

Those home gardeners who are fortunate enough to own a heated greenhouse are about to start on the busiest season of the year. There are seeds of bedding-out annual flowers to sow, tomatoes to start, rooted cuttings to pot on, chrysanthemum stools to be forced into growth for the production of cuttings, and a dozen and one other jobs to be done.

The big problem is to find enough room for everything, and these green-house gardeners who find themselves cramped for space every spring should try their hand at putting up a few temporary shelves to take oare of the overload. I use the word "try" advisedly, for there are a lot of ifs, and, and buts involved.

In the first place, a greenhouse shelf should never be placed where it is likely to cut off too much light from the plants below. We don't have any too much sunshire available at this season of the year and we can't afford to waste any of it. Seedlings raised in insufficient light become "drawn" and skinny as they reach up for what little light there and these never make sturdy, vigorous plants.

Another problem in the placement of temporary shelves involves the watering of the pots and boxes of seedlings and slips. One common error is to mount a shelf so close to the eaves that a watering can cannot be tipped up enough to make the water flow. Keep an eye on the drip following the watering, for the drip water which has passed through a potful of soil can have an admost poisonous effect upon the plants below. * * *

Temperature control poses a whole new set of greenhouse problems at this season of the year. Many of the seeds we sow require very high temperatures we sow require very high temperatures for really vigorous germination — 80 degrees is none too high, and some, like coleus and morning glory, need 86 to 90 degrees to coax them out of their shells in a hurry. Once they are up and growing, they should be grown on in much cooler conditions. It would be very expensive to heat up the whole green house to optimum seed-germinating temperature; besides, such extreme warmth wouldn't be good for the other occupants of the house.

The trick here is to construct a makeshift propagating case — you might call it a greenhouse within a

Heat for your propagating case could some from a proper soil-heating electric cable embedded in sand below the pots and boxes, or there are various improvisations which are sure to come to mind. For a small case, an ordinary 40-watt electric light bulb may generate enough warmth. As I think I told you before, one of my green-thumbed neighbors germinates fine batches of seedlings using an electric heating pad snitched from his wife's bed. Such a pad has its own built-in thermostat to turn the power off and on, maintaining

Whatever you use, always remember to shift the seedlings as soon as they come up from the warm propagating case into the cool of the outer greenhouse. Cool conditions together with plenty of sunlight are absolutely essential to produce the desired sturdy, storics, wheat registed shired sturdy.

Now, of course, the ideal teacher is one who combines both traits: The power and diligence to master a subject thoroughly, and the ability to communicate his knowledge in an interesting and stimulating fashion. Unfortunately, not meets this rigorous standard.

If we are forced to take our

If we are forced to take our choice, I should prefer to have college students (undergraduates, at least) taught by the shallow scholar with zest, rather than by the "sound." scholar with dryness, duliness, and composity. and pomposity.
Children, for instance, do not "naturally" rebel against mathematics; they rebel against the terrible way it has been taught in the past. Much thought he is also an entertainer — for unless he can really instruct or edify them.

Sound scholarship is necessary in the graduate school, which presumably has weeded out those of limited intellectual attainments. But undergraduates must first be made to feel that a subject is appealing and relevant to their concerns; unless this happens, they will not retain what they have learned 24 hours beyond examination

Except for the professional schools, teachers should be chosen more for their personal attributes than for their scholarship: For M they can-not make their field seem exciting and challenging to young minds, then they are in the wrong profession, and should devote themselves to research or some other solitary occupation.

The teacher who knows all the answers is not always the one who knows the right questions to ask; the teacher who makes us want to find out the answers for ourselves is the only one who has genuinely contributed to the real end of education - which is, a lust for knowing. * * *

districts with compulsory membership was to be created in B.C., to back up the new regional district hospital financing authority announced in the House Friday by Health Minister Wesley Black.

The premier said Tuesday night the old hospital financing formula will be scrapped "as soon as the new financing authority goes into effect."

NEAR FUTURE

Legislation to authorize establishment of the financing authority to market governmentdebentures will be brought into future, and the regional board legislation will be brought in later, said Mr. Bennett. He said that while the new authority might be called upon to market $25,000,000 worth of hospital construction bonds dur-ing the first year of its because this has to come by local initiative." BAME PAYMENTS

Mill rates will be on a regional assessment basis so that taxpayers in unorganized territory, for example, would make the same payments towards hospital bond issues as those in Saanich or Victoria.

The premier also said that under the new plan regions will be able to buy existing private hospitals or build new ones.

PT'S IMPORTANT

"There's only one thing more continued, "because if you haven't got health you've got nothing."

The premier also disclosed in the interview outside the House that it was not until B.C.'s 1967-68 budget was brought down in the House that financiers gave B.C. the go ahead on a $25,000,000 borrowing for school construction programs.

LIKE WILDFIRE

"Suspicion goes down the street like wildfire," he said, and the money market was tight. "But our last budget reaction was terrific, and the money eased up." He had said earlier in the House that there was a day last fall when there was "no bottom in the money market anywhere the world. Thank goodness that day we had these great money reserves built up.

BIG EFFECT "We've been waiting for things to ease up a little and it did ease up a fittle and it did ease after this budget speech was released. The bud-get had a tremendous effect in the financial world."

MANUFACTURING PLANT

Modern and efficient to the last detail. This spacious beautifully designed plant is the combination of over 60 years of successful jam making during which Empress products have outsold all others in Canada Lakes.

EMPRESS are the original users of the vacuum method of processing jams, jellies and marmalades in Western Canada. There is still no better method known to process these products. Vacuum cooking, or as we call it "Cool Cook," requires only 107° F. under vacuum to finish the product. The conventional open kettle requires 222° F. to do the same job. There are numerous advantages for the "Cool Cook," such as more flavor, better color, finer texture and a more economical operation. When a better technique is developed for even finer quality and economy, we guarantee Empress will be first.

Part of our success over the years is our close reintionship with the farmers. We work hand in hand with them to maintain a smooth flow of the highest possible quality fruit to our plant. This partnership assists the grower to attain a higher economic unit and a good income for his efforts and investment. EMPRESS peanut butter is produced by the most modern "Cold Pack" process. Long cooling periods rob peanut butter of flavor and darken the color. Our process, rapid chills the peanut butter to retain the natural flavor and color of the peanuts. In addition, it is double milled to produce the ultimate in a smooth, creamy texture. Try it once—you'll be convinced.

We are, for all practical purposes, the only sizable exporter of Jam, Jellies and Marmalade in Canada. We distribute to warehouses in all the Western States of the U.S.A. From these warehouses, there is flow of product to most of the remaining states. Exports mean dollars coming to Canada for bigger and better payrolls.

Two proposals for a national public-television system are currently being studied in the U.S. Six months ago, the Ford Foundation suggested a series of domestic satellites which would save the existing commercial networks millions of dollars in transmission costs. This saving would be used to create a public network.

TUNED

THE PARTY OF THE P

And in the last few weeks, the Carnegie Commission has put forward a similar network proposal to be financed by a small excise tax on the sale of TV sets.

The Carnegie plan calls for a fair degree of independence for local stations in the public system, while the Ford proposal em-phasizes the need for a strong network.

As UFI crisic Rick Du Brow says, the two reports "are saying implicitly . . . that commercial broadcasting has not fulfilled its significant obligations to the publiclyowned airwaves with which it has been entrusted all these years."

The Carnegie Commission also takes a polite swing at curent TV broadcasting: "We seek for the artists, the technicians, the journalist, the scholar, and the public servant freedom to create, freedom to innovate, freedom to be heard in this most far-reaching medium. We seek for the citizen freedom to view, to see programs that the present system, by its incompleteness, denies him." And Variety, the show-business paper, wrote: "Implicit in the Commission's recommendations . . . is just possibly the most damning indictment of the commercial TV medium ever rendered." With comment like that, perhaps better TV pregramming is in sight.

with Alec Merriman

We blooded our new travel wagon on the shakedown trip to Campbell River over the weekend. Fishing with Campbell River guide John Ebert and Finlayson Arm salmon guide Gordy Lamont we brought home six steelhead from the Oyster, Quinsam and Campbell Rivers.

Right smart we discovered we hadn't brought along any-ng in which to place the fish and we now have steelhead scales and roe smattered about the wagon. Big plastic bags will be standard equipment from now on.

We took the travel wagon over some pretty rough logging roads and trails and found the limited slip axle (positraction) was a definite asset. The big protruding west coast mirrors appeared to be for the birds in bush travel, but they were pretty nice to see through when we came to a dead-end road at a broken bridge and had to back up on the narrow trall for a

Lamont, Annabelle Grice and wife Taffy were along for the first trip and we returned to Cedar Lake, midway between Campbell River and Kelsey Bay. There we tried out the LP stove and dinette with a ham steak, deer-sausage and bean

In all, except for cracking one of the big mirrors and finding out the factory supplied us with nearly empty LP gas bombs for cooking, it was an exceptionally satisfying shake-The heavy duty springs and big-six engine served us well on the pot-holed, muddy-overgrown logging trails, * * *

It was quite an event to see Lamont get his first steelhead from the Oyster.

Gordy, who is an expert freshwater fisherman and hunter as well as a salmon guide, taught Ebert how to fish properly about 10 or 12 years ago. They fished the Cowichan River from top to bottom and today they talk about some exception-

Ebert had hooked the only fish in the Quinsam on the On the Oyster that evening it was Ebert showing the old master how to fish his river. We caught all the steelhead within half a mile of the mouth, just above the new bridge.

Ebert made a cast and drifted his bait through the run. He apparently had a touch, but didn't sink the hook. "There's one in there, Gordy," he said. "Come and get it."
Gordy waded out to Ebert and placed his lure just where Ebert said. On the second drift he hooked, and later beached just above where Lamont got his, and so did we. "She's a fresh hot run in the Oyster tonight," Ebert said. Incidentally, Lamont lost his carvas game carry-all containing his plastic tackle holder with all his steelhead rigging and he thinks he left it on the banks of the Campbell below the Comox Logging bridge. If anyone found it, there is a reward for turning it over to Ebert at the Rustic Motel or the

Oldtime Campbell River fisherman Frank Dingwall is proclaiming that this will be known as the Year of the Big Fish and he predicts the Salmon River will give up a 27-pound steelhead this season.

He had been connected with the project for two years and eight months, since its beginning, and had done as much as anyone in support of the group. The group had been operating without a budget in this time, and had done a tremshous amount of work, which met with little results. The group had developed an analysimated the services of ambulance, fire protection, police, recreation and transportation.

NANAIMO—A man delanding himself in court has won two out of three and has implied that his appeals may lead to complete acquittal.

John Peter Henshaw, 23, of Vancouver, stood trial here on six counts of utering forged documents.

Crown Counsel Don Cmiffe had brought all the witnesses connected with the Duncan and Namaimo charges, but falled to produce enough evidence to convict,

Boxing Starts Friday Centennial Spirit Everywhere

By MARY TAYLOR

PORT ALBERNI - Everywhere you look, someone is planning some sort of centennial event in the Albernis hese days. On Friday, the Centennial Boxing Tournament will be held at the Alberni Athletic Hall, with Mainland and local youngsters in the ring. Sixty-four rinks will be sweeping like mad over the weekend, from Thursday till Sunday Bonspiel. in the Centennial Saturday and Sunday the Valley art group will put on its spring show in the arts and crafts building in Recreation

Park, with Molly Privet of the Victoria district as guest couver Island archers indoor championships will be held in the drill hall.

The recent schedule put out the centennial committee shows similar activity for all something new being added almost every day.

The firemen, for example, have their own centennial project. They're going to restore the 1912 McLaughing Buick once carned by the first Buick, once owned by the first mayor of the city, A. E. Waterhouse, when the city was incorporated in 1912. The boys at the fire hall have started by cleaning the car and sending for informa-tion. But don't get the idea cleaning means a wax-and-polish job.

being gone over, bit by bit. The chassis is at a local engineering plant for a thorough steam cleaning.

Other bits and pieces are in various garages and storage areas, waiting for their turn at rejuvenation. But by the end of centennial year, and hopefully long before that, the vintage our will be like new Mayor Hammer had a couple of other centennial projects to suggest, too. An interested citizen has come up with an idea to include thos communities along the canal that are not big enough to undertake their own centennial events. He suggested a visit by dugout cance, down the canal to Kildonan, Ucluelet area and back via Bam-Mayor Hammer agreed this prove an interesting event, since nearly all travel down the canal used to be done with came and paddle in the early days. Power boats, and possibly even the Lady Rose, could make the trip, to take well-wishers and keep an eye out, for the safety of the paddlers, he suggested.

While in a centennial mood, council also undertook plans for the coming centennial baske thall championships here, March 14 - 18. Port Alberni council has offered to host to the players from across the country — for a civic luncheon during the PORT ALBERNI - A quiet month for the Port Alberni fire department resulted in additional time for fire pre-vention work in January.

Most serious fire of the month was on a marine tug resulting in $50 worth of damage. Three other calls, a defective chimney, a clothes dryer fire and fire in a garbage hag caused no ap-preciable damage. * * *

One false alarm, with good intent, was reported, and one inhalator call received from a B.C. Telephone operator for an Alberni address was trans-ferred to the Alberni fire call for Alberni.

Firemen carried out five inspections of hotels and apartments, three inspections of public halls, one school and one commercial building inspection.

Regular staff members also were taken on a four of Alberni Pacific Division. Gradually the paid fire crew is becoming acquainted with all industrial plants and businesses on an individual basis.
